At Texas Tech, we talk a lot about research. But did you ever wonder how that research impacts you? What about how it affects our state, our nation, even the world?

In Season Two of Fearless, we talk about some of that transformative work and the motivations behind it, like:

A program that helps young people with autism explore the possibility of parenthood...

Or a professor in nutritional sciences investigating the connection between Alzheimer’s and diabetes...

And we’ll introduce you to the ultimate greenhouse. How researchers are helping all of us become better stewards of our planet.

Season Two of Fearless is going inside the research at Texas Tech, not only to explain it, but to introduce you to the ‘whys’ behind the work. It’s coming this August wherever you get your podcasts.